Gerhard Richter: Paintings 2001-2005

November 14 - January 14, 2006

Opening Reception: Thursday, November 17, 6-8 pm

The Marian Goodman Gallery is delighted to announce an exhibition of new work by Gerhard Richter which will open to the public on Thursday, November 14th and will be on view through Saturday, January 14th .

The exhibition will be the most recent presentation of the artist's work in New York since his exhibition four years ago at Marian Goodman (2001), and since the retrospective Gerhard Richter: 40 Years of Painting , held at The Museum of Modern Art in 2002, which traveled to The Art Institute of Chicago, San Francisco's Museum of Modern Art, and The Hirshhorn Museum & Sculpture Garden, Washington, D.C.

On view will be a major representation of the works made by the artist from 2001 and 2005, including two important cycles of new paintings, as well as individual paintings, and a series of large-format drawings rare in scale and the first of their kind since the appearance of the 1999 catalogue raisonné of the drawings, Gerhard Richter: Drawings 1964-1999 .

The two new series of paintings include four Silikat pictures, "885-1-- 885-4" (2003) whose black and grey planes explore the nexus between abstraction and representation, taking as their point of departure photographically enlarged molecular structures. A separate cycle of works will include a series of twelve paintings from 2005, " 892-1 -- 892-12" (2005), in which the artist's pictorial stratagems are developed within the context of a succession of large-format abstractions.

A fully illustrated catalogue, Gerhard Richter: Paintings 2001-2005 will be published on the occasion of the exhibition and will include three new texts: an essay by Dr. Dieter Schwartz of Kunstmuseum Winterthur, Switzerland, and an essay and interview by Benjamin H.D. Buchloh, Rosenblatt Professor of Modern Art at Harvard University. The catalogue will also include full-color reproductions of the exhibition.
